Designed for beginners to black powder!

The Country Hunter (1780-1850) .50 caliber flintlock rifle is handy and features a dull bronzed barrel. Primarily designed for newcomers to black powder looking for an inexpensive model to start with. This short, simple and highly maneuverable rifle was the favorite weapon of American farmers. Manufactured with an anti-reflective bronzed barrel, and a marbled frame, it is the ideal weapon for those who want to learn the pleasure of shooting muzzle-loading weapons. It is mainly used for hunting.
