Spouts of different capacities to adapt to different calibers.

The black powder spouts are mounted on powder cans and allow the right dose of powder to be poured directly into the weapon in the event of a historical re-enactment or into pods for the shooting range.

Each spout has a certain volume which corresponds to a charge of black powder expressed in grains by the Anglo-Saxons and in grams in the metric system.

For the record, 1 gram equals 15.432 grains.
