A bolt-action rifle equipped for optics

The Winchester XPR Sporter Threaded comes with two Weaver bases. This configuration simplifies the installation of a suitable scope, as the rifle lacks front and rear sights. Its Grade 1 Turkish wood stock maintains a classic profile, complemented by an Inflex I recoil pad.

Threaded barrel and five calibers available

The Hunter-profile steel barrel features an M14x1 thread , allowing it to accept a compatible muzzle brake or suppressor. The .243 Winchester , .270 Winchester , .30-06 Springfield , and .308 Winchester versions have a 53 cm barrel. The .300 Winchester Magnum variant has a 61 cm barrel and an overall length of 114 cm.

Controls and power supply

The bolt action is configured for a right-handed shooter, while the stock is ambidextrous. The detachable Drop Box Magazine holds three rounds, plus one round in the chamber. A MOA trigger and a two-position safety complete the equipment. A dedicated button allows the bolt to be unlocked while the safety remains engaged.

Acquisition conditions and regulations

This rifle falls under category C. Its purchase is subject to declaration. The purchaser must present the applicable regulatory documents, including a valid hunting license, a valid shooting, clay pigeon shooting or biathlon license, or a collector's card where regulations allow.

Carrying the weapon is prohibited without a legitimate reason. Transporting it requires a legitimate reason, and the weapon must be rendered immediately unusable. At home, it must be stored in a safe or gun cabinet, either by removing a separately stored component or by means of a device preventing its removal. Ammunition must be stored separately.
