Black powder Pedersoli replica of the Brown Bess rifle.

Used from 1740 by various units (mainly dragoons). Shorter than the Long Land Pattern at 58.5 inches (149 cm) due to the 42 inch (110 cm) barrel, and lighter due to the use of brass instead of iron for many components. The shorter barrel was used to make the Brown Bess more maneuverable without affecting accuracy.

This model will be found in North America and will equip several units including the Canadian acrobats and probably the militia.

Replica of the Brown Bess rifle offered by Davide Pedersoli in a complete finished version or in a kit to assemble, sand, tint or even according to your tastes.
