A classic black powder revolver from the Civil War, revisited in a pocket version.

Replica with factory-shortened barrel based on the model of weapons shortened by their users of the time for concealed carry.

- Marbled carcass
- Made in Italy

Ideal for collectors or black powder sports shooters.

Quickly upon the release of the 1860 Army, users began to cut the 8-inch barrel to hide it more easily.

This type of black powder revolver, 6 shots in the language of westerns, is an over-the-counter weapon ideal for learning sports shooting.

The Colt 1860 Army model differs mainly from the Colt 1851 by the carcass/barrel connection which also serves as a guide for the repressor. Subsequently, this revolver was very popular with cowboys for its reliability and low weight.

Reloading requires bulk black powder, wads, lead bullets and primers.
