RWS 1075+ primers reduce the risk of false starts compared to conventional 1075 primers.

The RWS 1075 Plus reinforced primers are presented as a more robust version of the standard 1075 primers. We often find ourselves annoyed by misfires, even if the primer has detonated correctly. This situation may be due to mechanical particularities of the black powder weapon, the use of pre-compressed propellant charges or powders with altered chemical properties. To remedy these problems, the solution lies in the 1075 Plus, ensuring reliable percussion with every shot.

Many black powder shooting enthusiasts keep a box of 1075 Plus primers in their shooting bag. For what? Because these primers effectively burn weapon chambers, providing increased reliability with every use. The 1075 Plus therefore proves to be a wise choice for those who want to maximize the effectiveness of their replicas when shooting black powder.

Versatile, the RWS 1075 Plus primers are suitable for long weapons as well as pistols and revolvers, as mentioned on the box. They are suitable for all percussion replicas equipped with a No. 11 size chimney. However, it is important to note that, as "magnum" primers, they may cause slightly faster wear of the chimney. Opt for reliability and power with the RWS 1075 Plus primers, ensuring an uncompromising black powder shooting experience.
