Reproduction of the USM1 carbine used by American paratroopers in 1944.

Replica of M1A1 Carbine paratrooper model with folding hardware, USA 1941 (WWII) with fabric strap.

M1 Carbine (officially United States Carbine, .30 caliber, M1) is a lightweight semi-automatic rifle that was a standard weapon of the United States Army during World War II and the Korean War, being produced in versions different. It was widely used by the American, foreign and paramilitary armed forces, being at the same time a popular folk weapon.
