A rifle designed for old-fashioned shooting

On the firing line, you immediately recognize what makes great American single-shot rifles so appealing: a long profile, a solid balance, and a grip that encourages deliberate shooting. This version is naturally aimed at fans of Western shooting , traditional sport shooting , and collectors looking for a modern firearm with a decidedly classic style.

Falling Block Mechanism: simplicity, robustness, consistency

The Falling Block system is prized for its mechanical robustness and immediate feedback of operation. The opening is clean, the loading is manual, and extraction is ensured by a dedicated extractor. In practice, this design promotes calm, methodical use, offering a genuine pleasure of handling for the shooter who likes to take their time.

28-inch barrel and 45-70 caliber GOVT

With its 28-inch barrel, this Chiappa benefits from a classic configuration perfectly suited to the .45-70 GOVT . This iconic caliber holds a special place in the world of traditional shooting: it evokes history, yet remains highly sought after for precision shooting sessions with a controlled rate of fire. The 1:18 twist rate contributes to this logic of use by providing a solid technical foundation for properly utilizing this load.

Double trigger and traditional open sights

The presence of dual triggers reinforces the overall premium and traditional character of the rifle. It's exactly the kind of detail that enthusiasts notice immediately. The open sights, consisting of a dovetail blade front sight adjustable for windage and a semi-buckhorn rear sight adjustable for windage and elevation, remain true to the original design while allowing for a considerable range of adjustment at the shooting range.

Hand-oiled wood and color case finish

Visually, this version scores points. The color case combined with the blued barrel gives the firearm real character, without being over the top. The hand-oiled walnut stock and forend add that extra touch of authenticity that connoisseurs seek. The presentation is refined and inviting, with a finish that immediately enhances the product both in a display case and on the shelf.
