A 32g load for small game

This Winchester Plains Fiber Wad cartridge uses a 32g lead shot load in 12-gauge (12-70) . Its intended use is clearly defined: small game hunting . The P8, P7, and P6 versions offer this configuration with different shot sizes.

Fatty fiber wadding

The configuration uses a fiber wad , also known as a grease wad . This is one of the key features of this cartridge and an important selection criterion for hunters specifically looking for a 12-gauge cartridge equipped with this type of wad.

12-70 caliber and a velocity of 395 m/s

Chambered in 12-gauge (12-70) , this cartridge boasts a stated muzzle velocity of 395 m/s . Combined with its 32g powder charge, this data allows both retailers and hunters to precisely identify the ballistic configuration advertised for the range.

Regulation

Category: C 8°. 12 gauge cartridges intended for smoothbore hunting weapons fall under this subcategory.

Acquisition requirements: Purchase requires a valid form of identification and a hunting license with its current or previous year's validation, or a valid shooting or clay pigeon shooting license. The customer must have an open SIA account.

Proof of weapon: for category C 8° ammunition, presentation of the receipt for declaration of the corresponding weapon is not required.

Possession and storage: no maximum legal quota for home storage is specified for legally acquired Category C 8° ammunition. It must be stored under conditions preventing free access, in a safe, strongbox, locked cabinet, or drawer, separate from firearms when not stored in a safe.

Port and transport: Porting is prohibited without a legitimate reason. Transport requires a legitimate reason, and the regulations applicable to category C products must be respected.

FAQ

What documents are required to purchase these 12 gauge cartridges?

For ammunition classified as category C 8°, the purchaser must present, among other things, a valid form of identification and proof of acceptable activity: a hunting license with validation for the current or previous year, or a valid shooting or clay pigeon shooting license. An open SIA account is also required.

Do I need to present the rifle registration receipt to buy these rounds of ammunition?

No. For ammunition falling under category C 8°, the receipt for declaration of the corresponding weapon is not required upon acquisition, unlike certain other subcategories of category C ammunition.
