A traditional presentation for your deer trophies

A fine roe deer deserves a display stand that highlights its character without detracting from the trophy. The Country-style solid oak roe deer escutcheon (230 x 140 mm) offers an elegant presentation, true to the traditions of hunting decor.

Its elongated silhouette is distinguished by a slightly domed upper section, curved shoulders, and a base ending in a softened point. Its proportions allow for the highlighting of deer carcasses while maintaining a visible antler surface around the skull.

The authentic charm of varnished solid oak

Solid oak is prized for its natural grain, durability, and warm tones. Each escutcheon displays variations in color and texture characteristic of real wood, adding character to the trophy's presentation.

The varnished finish highlights the oak grain while making daily maintenance easier. It protects the surface from everyday dirt and helps maintain its neat appearance over time.

This traditional material goes particularly well with roe deer antlers and decorative elements in a hunting lodge or trophy room.

Decorative moldings to highlight the trophy

The shield's outline is crafted with raised moldings that follow its curves and frame the central section. This profiling adds depth to the piece and emphasizes its traditional design.

With its dimensions of 230 x 140 mm , this model has a slightly wider silhouette than the 230 x 130 mm shields. This extra width allows for a little more space around the skull, depending on the trophy's design.

The lower tip with softened contours completes the whole and brings a harmonious finish to this wooden stand for a roe deer trophy .

An integrated wall mount for displaying your hunting souvenirs

The back of the badge features a V-shaped metal bracket positioned in a vertical groove. This allows for discreet wall mounting, with a fixing suitable for the weight of the entire piece.

The front face accommodates the prepared carcass or skull using a suitable mounting system. Once installed, the trophy can be displayed alone or as part of a deer trophy collection.

This type of presentation is suitable both for hunters wishing to preserve the memory of a particular kill and for taxidermists seeking a traditional medium for their creations.

FAQ

What is the difference between a 230 x 130 mm badge and a 230 x 140 mm model?

Both models are the same height of 230 mm, but the 230 x 140 mm version offers an additional 10 mm of width. This difference can be advantageous for a slightly wider skull or to preserve more antler on either side of the trophy. Since the shapes of the two shields also differ, the choice will also depend on the desired aesthetic.

Can a whole deer skull be mounted on this shield?

A mount with a whole skull is possible if its dimensions and mounting system are compatible with the base. However, prepared or shortened skulls are generally easier to integrate onto a shield of this size. For a large whole skull, a larger base can offer a more balanced presentation.

How to care for a varnished solid oak shield?

Regular dusting with a soft, dry cloth is usually sufficient. If marks remain, use a very slightly damp cloth and wipe immediately. Avoid abrasive products, solvents, and prolonged exposure to moisture or direct heat to preserve the varnish and the natural appearance of the wood.
