A large crest to enhance your roe deer trophies

Some trophies deserve a special place in a collection. With its generous dimensions, the 300 x 230 mm solid oak Country deer trophy allows you to showcase hunting souvenirs while respecting the traditional codes of hunting decor.

Its distinctive silhouette features a slightly domed upper body, curved shoulders, rounded flanks, and a well-defined lower point. This classic profile lends a striking presence to the background and naturally frames the deer carcass.

With its 300 mm height and 230 mm width , this model offers a particularly interesting surface for imposing trophies or for hunters wishing to keep a wide border of wood visible around the skull.

Solid varnished oak: authenticity and elegance

Solid oak is a material traditionally prized for displaying hunting trophies. Its robustness, distinctive grain, and natural nuances give it a warm aesthetic that perfectly complements the antlers of the roe deer.

Each piece has its own unique grain, sometimes marked by slight variations in color or small knots. These natural characteristics add character to the emblem and highlight the authenticity of the real wood.

The varnished finish highlights the oak grain and makes surface maintenance easier. It also helps protect the wood from everyday dirt, ensuring a neat appearance for years to come.

Intricate moldings for a traditional finish

The decorative raised moldings follow the contours of the shield and add visual depth to the whole. They create an elegant frame around the central surface, without diverting attention from the trophy.

The rounded upper part and the side cutouts give character to the silhouette, while the lower point harmoniously extends the lines of the support.

This combination of curves and reliefs is particularly suitable for roe deer trophies mounted on shields , in a rustic interior, a trophy room or a hunting lodge.

A generous format for various trophy displays

Compared to the 230 x 140 mm or 240 x 180 mm shields, this 300 x 230 mm model offers more space to arrange the prepared skull and balance its presentation.

It is a particularly useful solution for depicting roe deer with well-developed antlers or for mounts requiring a larger support surface. However, the choice of format must take into account the dimensions of the skull and the arrangement of the antlers.

Its central surface also allows for the addition of a small commemorative plaque bearing a date or the name of a hunting territory, depending on the space left by the trophy.

A discreet and practical wall-mounted pendant light

The back of the badge is fitted with a V-shaped metal clip , fixed in a vertical groove. This allows the badge to be hung on the wall while maintaining a discreet appearance.

The prepared skull or trophy is attached to the front using a suitable mounting system. For a permanent installation, a wall fixing should be chosen that is appropriate for the type of wall and the total weight of the trophy.

Once installed, this wooden hunting trophy plaque can become the centerpiece of a collection or complement a wall composition combining several trophies of different sizes.

FAQ

What size badge should I choose for a large deer trophy?

For a large roe deer trophy, a 300 x 230 mm plaque offers a larger display area than standard sizes. This allows for better visual balance between the skull and its mount, especially when the antlers are particularly well-developed. Before choosing a plaque, it is advisable to measure the prepared skull and check the space required for mounting.

Can this emblem be used to display a whole deer skull?

Yes, this large format can be suitable for some full skull mounts, provided that the skull's dimensions and its mounting system are compatible with the available surface. For a harmonious result, it is recommended to position the trophy on the shield before permanently attaching it.

How to attach a deer trophy to a wooden plaque without damaging it?

The trophy can be mounted using a trophy screw or a device specifically designed for preparing the skull. It is best to precisely mark the location before drilling and to create a pilot hole appropriate for the screw diameter to minimize the risk of splitting the oak. The mounting must securely hold the trophy without exerting excessive pressure on the wood or any fragile parts of the skull.
