Rifle with rifled black powder barrel and breech loading by falling block mechanism.

- Paper cartridge
- 7-rifled barrel at a pitch of 1:48" or 1200 mm.

Among the weapons produced in the Confederate arsenals during the American Civil War, there is a rifle copied on the model of the Sharps 1859, which was made about two thousand copies by the SC Robinson Arms Manufactory of Richmond, Virginia, between 1862 and 1863. The rifle differed from the original Sharps in the absence of the automatic priming device located on the upper part of the receiver. Our reproduction is for American gunfire enthusiasts as well as Civil War battle reenactors.
